

CAMPBELL CLARK

Chief Political Writer, The Globe and Mail

Campbell Clark is the Chief Political Writer for The Globe and Mail. Mr. Clark is based in Ottawa, he writes about Canada's public policy and political debate in columns and features. He has been a political, business, and investigative journalist, working for The Gazette (Montreal), the National Post, and The Globe and Mail.

Mr. Clark's work has garnered journalism awards including the Michener Award for his work with colleague Daniel Leblanc investigating the sponsorship scandal, and he has covered, among other things, Quebec politics, foreign policy and foreign affairs, and seven federal elections.